Working for Coordination Group Publications Limited may result in you obtaining information of a confidential nature relating to our publications, working methods or business. You are required to keep confidential any information provided to you by CGP. You must not disclose to any third party any information relating to your undertaking of work for CGP, except where such information becomes general public knowledge (for example, on publication of the title which you have worked on). This duty remains binding upon you without limitation in time even after your work on a publication has ended.

The information held on our database will be processed for CGP's specific purposes only. We only hold data that is relevant to CGP and we try to ensure that the data is accurate. This data will only be updated with your prior consent. We hold data no longer than is necessary and it is not used by, or passed to, any third parties. (Please note: if you contribute to any of our products, we will need to keep some details on file indefinitely).

I have read and understood all of the above and I authorise CGP to hold my details on their database.
